“ I just read Kevin's obituary in the Enterprise and want to express my sincere condolences to the family. Kevin and I had several classes together in school in which we sat beside each other, including Mr. Barnhardt's 6th grade at Pinebrook and 10th grade World History class with Mr. Peeler. Those were good teachers and good classes on their own, but Kevin made them even more so. In Mr. B's class, we would have soccer games with the whole class at recess, and Kevin was a big part of those. You never knew where the ball would go when he kicked it, so we started calling him crooked-foot Wishon... he would laugh harder than anyone at himself and it helped us all just have fun regardless of how good or bad we were. And we both enjoyed talking about the history we were learning from Mr. Peeler. I wish I could have been in more classes with Kevin. He was always laughing, always in a good mood and maintained a good attitude, unpretentious, and a friend to all. I'm very sorry to learn of his passing this young, and I pray that you will find comfort in knowing how he enriched the lives of so many people over the years.

“ Kevin was my best friend when I was growing up. He and I would go exploring in the fields, woods and creeks near our houses in the summer time. We would play war in the tree log forts that he built in the woods. During the winter, we would go sledding down the hill across the street. It was always such a thrill to hurtle so fast and pray that we would stop before we'd hit the honeysuckle bushes at the bottom. He and I could always talk about anything and I know that I would always get the best advice from him. He was like the older brother that I never had. As we got older, we would see each other less and less as our lives went in different directions but I could always keep up with him by reading his short stories in the Enterprise. It pains me that he passed away so young. The world will truly not be the same without him. My condolences to his family and to those who knew him best.

“ Kevin was one of my best friends and when news of his passing reached me here in Tennessee I was heartbroken. I regret I missed his funeral service. I will remember fondly the impact he made on my life and the influence he had on my daily walk. Kevin was compassionate, thoughtful, and strong in so many ways. I remember one morning on the drive to school that Kevin introduced the song, "Song of the South" by Alabama, to me. Every time I hear that song I'll think of Kevin. May God comfort his family during what I know is a difficult time.

“ Kevin and Howard roamed the fields and woods as boys growing up in our neighborhood. Kevin was just the kind of friend that you wanted your child to have-- kind, considerate, and sweet. Later, he developed his writing talent, and we looked forward to reading his articles in the Davie Enterprise. We will remember him as a very special person.

“ This was such a shock to hear. Brad worked with Kevin during his time at Sears and they had a lot of good times. Kevin helped us out with lots of things and spent some late nights just talking. He will be greatly missed.
